Publications

A new edition of The English Dictionary from Cawdrey to Johnson 1604–1775, by DeWitt T. Starnes and Gertrude E. Noyes, was published in April 1991 by John Benjamins Publishing Company. Added to the original text are a substantive introduction and a bibliography by Gabriele Stein, professor of Linguistics in the University of Heidelberg and author of The English Dictionary before Cawdrey (1985). The 28-page introduction surveys the scholarly studies published since 1946 that cover this period in more detail.

A Dictionary of Modern Danish

On 28 June the Danish minister for Cultural Affairs and the director of the Carlsberg Foundation (owner of most Danish Breweries) jointly announced their sponsorship of a new six volume dictionary of modern Danish, Den Danske Ordbog. Under a fixed budget of 30 million DKK (6 million US$) and a fixed time schedule of eight years the three managing editors (Ebba Hjorth, Iver Kjær and Ole Norling-Christensen) and their staff at the University of Copenhagen shall build a text corpus of 40 million words and prepare a manuscript ready for printing. Gyldendal Publishers will do the printing and distribution, and pay royalties to a fund for promoting further lexicographical work. For the preparation of the manuscript the editors will use GestorLEX, an advanced SGML-based computational tool developed jointly by Gyldendal Publishers and the Danish softwarehouse TEXTware.

A Lexicographic Society in Iceland

A lexicographic society, Ordmennt, has recently been established in Iceland. The purpose of the society is to further practical and theoretical lexicographic work, and to strengthen contacts in the field abroad.

In the last few years there has been an increasing interest in dictionaries and lexicography, both at the University of Iceland in Reykjavik, and at individual publishing companies.

At the University's Institute of Lexicography, the extensive collections of citations gathered in the past four decades are being edited for a historical dictionary of Icelandic. In addition, the Institute has recently published an Icelandic etymological dictionary (Íslensk orðsifjabók), and a frequency dictionary (Íslensk orðtioníbók) will be published later this year. The Institute also publishes a journal, Ord og tunga.

There is a strong tradition for terminologic work in Iceland, especially as the formation of new Icelandic terms from Icelandic word stems is preferred to adopting loanwords from foreign languages. The Icelandic Language Committee (Íslensk málnefnd), which is affiliated to the University of Iceland, plays a central role in the terminologic work, both in the coordination of effort, and in the initiation of new projects. Among publications by the Language Committee are a data language dictionary (Tölvuordasafn, 2nd ed. 1986), and a spelling dictionary (Réttiríunarordabók, 1989).

As far as dictionaries are concerned, the interest of the publishing houses has mostly been centred on bilingual dictionaries, and the most ambitious project to date is a large English-Icelandic dictionary published by Órn og Örlygur in 1984. The same company also published the first Icelandic lexicon in 1990.

Anyone interested in lexicography is free to join the society, which will publish a newsletter and arrange talks and meetings on the subject.

For further information, please contact the society's chairman, Jón Hilmar Jónsson, Institute of Lexicography, University of Iceland, 101 Reykjavik, Iceland.

Dr Johnson’s House Basement Appeal

The house in which Dictionary Johnson compiled his famous work is in a financial crisis. After much consideration and expert advice the Trustees and Governors have launched this appeal to raise the £60,000 necessary to renovate the basement and turn it into a reception room with toilets and some kitchen facilities. It is believed that such a space can generate upwards of £100,000 each year, sited as it is in the centre of the City of London. Such a sum of money, earned annually, would place the running of Dr Johnson’s House on a sound financial footing, as well as ensuring that many more people were able to enjoy the house.

We urge you, therefore, to subscribe to this appeal by sending your cheques, made payable to ‘The Dr Johnson’s House Trust’, to Lord Harmsworth (The Chairman of the Trust), at The Old Rectory, Stoke Abbott, Beaminster, Dorset, DT8 3JT, and to visit the house if you are in London.
