1991 Verbatim Award

The full Verbatim Award of this year was made to Ms Jeannette Allsopp, Associate Researcher at the Caribbean Lexicography Project of the University of the West Indies. The Selection Panel chose Ms Alsopp's project Caribbean Multilingual Lexicography from among ten proposals received from seven countries. The main aim of the project is to provide a database of Caribbean lexicography in the major official languages of the area, viz. English, French and Spanish, from which a unidirectional Multilingual Dictionary of the Caribbean will be produced. The research and the dictionary are seen as a basic resource for a strongly needed linguistic integration of the Caribbean in order to facilitate closer collaboration in the areas of educational, cultural, social and economic development.

EURALEX International Congresses

The Proceedings of the Fourth EURALEX Congress, held at Benalmádena (Málaga, Spain) from 27 August to 2 September 1990 can be ordered from BIBLOGRAF S.A., Calabria 108, E-08015 Barcelona, Spain. Fax (+ 34) 3 423 68 98.

It is still not too late to join the Fifth Congress August 4–9, 1992 in Tampere, Finland. Please ask for information from the Congress Organizers:

Hannu Tommola and Krista Varantola, University of Tampere, P.O. Box 607, SF-33101 Tampere, Finland.

Even though the deadline for papers was 1 October, you may still submit short introductory papers (maximum 10 minutes) to the Workshop on Tools and Methods for Practical Lexicography. These submissions should reach the organizers in Tampere not later than April 15 1992. The workshop is a new feature for EURALEX congresses, and one of direct relevance to commercial dictionary-compiling and dictionary publishing. It will focus on such topics as corpus analysis; structured editing; dictionary parsing and its relevance to checking the contents of the book as well as to converting printers’ tapes and word processing files into structured (e.g. SGML) data; the benefits to publishers of research on electronic versions of printed dictionaries; electronic dictionaries per se.

Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, ... Congress: EURALEX welcomes proposals from Universities and other institutions to organize forthcoming International Congresses from 1994 onwards. Please write in the first instance to the Secretariat in Copenhagen to get further information and guidelines. It is extremely helpful when such an invitation includes mention of the type of accommodation available (with approximate prices at today’s rates), and some indication of the likely amount of the registration fee that would be set.

EURALEX Dictionary Use Workshop

Sunday, September 29, 1991: St. Catherine’s College, Oxford, UK

Over 80 people from 19 countries attended this one-day workshop, the purpose of which was to try to find out and record how people actually use dictionaries for translation purposes, to consider the skills needed by successful dictionary users, and to discuss aspects, helpful and unhelpful, of dictionary content and presentation.
After a welcome from Reinhard Hartmann, President of EURALEX, people set to work in pairs, one using dictionaries to help with translation tasks from the passages available (in nine languages), and the other recording on the forms provided the various steps in the dictionary look-up process. It is hoped to write up some results from these detailed records. Later, larger groups met to discuss their experiences and insights, with one member of each group acting as reporter and summarizing the views of their group.

In the afternoon participants completed a brief questionnaire (composed by Paul Bogaards and Frank Knowles) on where they would expect to find certain English phrases and idioms in their dictionaries. The completed questionnaires will be keyed, further research will follow, and the results will be written up.

Then, in the plenary reporting session, chaired by Sue Atkins, three group reporters (Klaus Birkenhauer, Strälen; Oddrun Grönnvik, Oslo; and Patrick Hanks, Oxford) summarized the views of the Workshop participants on the skills that dictionary users need and aspects of dictionaries that could be improved. The discussion that followed was lively and interesting.

The Workshop was organized for EURALEX by Sue Atkins (Oxford University Press, UK), Henri Béjoint (Lyon II University, France), Paul Bogaards (Leiden University, Netherlands), Frank Knowles (Aston University, UK), Gabriele Stein (Heidelberg University, Germany) and Krista Varantola (Tampere University, Finland). It preceded the Seventh Annual Conference of the University of Waterloo Centre for the New Oxford English Dictionary and Text Research, and secretariat facilities were generously provided by Oxford University Press, the Conference organizers. EURALEX is very grateful to OUP for this support.

The dictionaries used at the Workshop (over 180, monolingual and bilingual, in Danish, Dutch, English, Finnish, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Swedish) were donated by 17 European publishers. We greatly appreciate this generous response to our appeal for books to work with; the dictionaries now constitute a permanent EURALEX resource, available for other Workshops and similar activities involving practical dictionary use.

The Workshop was a great success: we all had a lot of fun and learned a lot too, even those of us whose waking hours are devoted to writing our own dictionaries and consulting other people's. Now that we have all these dictionaries at our disposal, all that's needed is for someone else to organize another Workshop. All offers to our Secretary at the EURALEX Danish address.
